The washout on the A. & S. E. between this place and Fairbank was larger than at first anticipated; several hundred feet of track being flooded causing a heavy delay. The rain is said to have fallen in torrents and all the washes were running full, leaving high water marks. The river was also booming. Trains are on time today, however, and appearances are for more rain.

A spirit medium writes to Bisbee for nformation whether it would pay her to drop in on the copper camp and remain in our midst to impart to the spiritually inclined messages from the departed, open wide to them the doors of the future and put them on the road to wealth. It would seem the wily medium was giving herselfaway. Why does not her "spirit" friends come to her rescue and tell her about Bisbee instead of depending on material sources for her information.

SMALL BEGINNINGS

Make great endings sometimes. Allments that we are apt to consider trivial often grow, through neglect, into atrocious maladies, dangerous in themselves and productive of others. It is the disregard of the earlier indications of ill health which leads to the establishment of all sorts of maladies on a chronic basis.
